Solium Capital ranks 148th on Branham's list of the 2009 Top 300 Canadian Tech. Companies

Calgary, Alberta, April 1, 2010 – Solium Capital has proven yet again its ability to lead the industry, by being named one of Branham's Top 300 Canadian Technology Companies – for the fourth year in a row – during a time of economic turbulence for many Canadian businesses.

Effective April 1, Solium ranked 148th on the Branham300 list, one spot up from last year, and 26 spots up from the previous year – improvements that reflect the company's ability to perform and thrive under any conditions, said Solium President & CEO Jeff English.

"We're not surprised that we've exceeded expectations, but we are thrilled to be recognized for our solid abilities to not only perform, but also to grow and expand during challenging times," he said.

The Branham300 highlights the top Canadian and multinational information and communication technology (ICT) companies operating in Canada and is widely considered to be a leading source of intelligence on the industry. The list is published annually in Backbone Magazine, which will be distributed with the Globe and Mail on April 7, and on the Branham300 website at www.branham300.com.
